ROSE WOLF MAKES ADMISSION

Suggests Leaving Town to Avoid Testifying in Wolf Case.

TELLS OF THEIR RELATIONS

Testimony Contained in Transcript Relates to Change in Stockman's Mood and Attitude Shortly Before His Death.

Rose Wolf has admitted she suggested to attorneys for Louis Wolf's heirs the advisability of their getting her out of town to prevent her giving testimony in the suits of the heirs to collect $4,000 insurance from the Astor and Pacific Mutual Life Insurance companies. The admission is contained in a transcript of testimony given by Miss Wolf for use when the suits come to trial.

Louis Wolf, a prominent South Omaha live stock dealer and ranch owner, was found shot to death the morning of June 30. The body lay in the street not far from the home of Rose Wolf.

Miss Wolf testified that during the week preceding his death Wolf had suffered financial losses and was deeply worried, he did not appear natural to her; he made remarks that in the light of what later happened seemed prophetic to her.

The Last Few Days.
Miss Wolf related in detail how Wolf maintained her home and supported her in the Central apartments. Then she told of the experience of the last days before his death. From her story it appears her relations with Wolf had gone on for four years. During the last year Wolf was less lavish in his expenditures for the home in the Central apartment and Miss Wolf did not always have all the money she wanted. Wolf deceived his wife and family by having Miss Wolf represent herself as long distance and call his family home, after which he would talk, pretending to be out of the city, and explain that he could not get home.

During the few weeks preceding Wolf's death they had some talks about ending their relations and Wolf said "I just let it go, it would all be to an end pretty soon."

Goodbye Was Affectionate.

Three or four days before his death Wolf was sick from drinking and when she tried to talk with him, he told her that after the following Monday he wanted her to forget that she ever had known such a person. He frequently told her the police were after him. The evening before he was found dead, he told her he was going to Silver City and left her. His good-bye was more affectionate than usual. He made her go to a hotel for the night because he said the detectives were going to the apartment to try and find them together. He told her, she said, Mayor Dahlman had sent him a note to that effect.

Lost on Speculations.

Miss Wolf said Wolf was hard up before he died. He had lost $6,000 through speculations in grain and had to borrow $100 from her. For a week before his death he was extremely nervous, being unable to sit still even through his meals. He would eat a bite or two and then pace around the room, and so on through the meal. Two days before he was found dead he spent the night in Miss Wolf's apartment, but could not sleep. He remarked about the twittering of the sparrows in the morning and said they were calling to him.

R. A. Van Orsdal of Baldrige, DeBord & Fradenberg, counsel for the Wolf estate, asked Miss Wolf if she had not told several persons, among them City Detective James Donohue, that there was something coming to her out of the Wolf estate and she was going to get it either from the insurance companies or from Wolf's people. She denied having asked the attorneys for Wolf's family to pay her money to leave town. She admitted that she told the attorneys that if they "would get her and keep her out of town she could not testify."

Pursuer is Trapped for His Attentions to Beautiful Woman

So divinely beautiful did a young society woman appear to Carl Shoemaker that he secured her name and address and sent messages to her pouring forth his soul and his undying love. Carl was smitten right.

He sat on the street the other evening and he was so thoroughly stricken with her attractive face and fluffy hair that he followed her to her home. In this way he secured her address and after having learned her name by more or less ingenuity he began to pen love messages to her. He offered to love, cherish, marry and protect her and all that sort of stuff.

The young woman became alarmed and was afraid to go out on the street again until Carl was out of the way. She put him out of the way in quick order. She told detectives of the pursuit and then penned a letter to Carl promising to meet him at the Paxton hotel. Carl was there at the appointed hour, but instead of meeting the fair young lady he bumped into the detectives who were there waiting for him.

Carl, who lives at 1907 North Twenty-seventh street, is now in jail charged with being a suspicious character.

Two rooms at Farnam school were fumigated and two more at Central will be fumigated. Franklin school was the first affected, but the contagion has been wiped out at that building.

Eight-year-old Catherine Morgan, 135 North Thirty-second avenue, who was attending Farnam, became ill with diphtheria yesterday and the room in which she studied and the grade room where her sister was have been fumigated.

A case of diphtheria was reported from Central school and two rooms where pupils were exposed are being fumigated.

SCHOOL POLITICS ARE WARM

Dr. Holovitchner Maintains He Will Have Votes Enough to Win.

VACANCY IS TO BE FILLED

Some Assert that the Office of President Depends Upon the Man Who Takes the Place of George Cott.

Members of the Board of Education are figuring that the presidency after the first of the year will fall when the resignation of the Seventh ward member, George Cott, is presented and an election is held to fill the vacancy.

For this place Dr. B. W. Christie is being pitted against Alfred C. Kennedy, and the faction supporting each insists it has the votes to win out. Success in filling this vacancy is expected to determine whether Dr. Holovitchner will be re-elected president or give way to someone from the other side.

Dr. Holovitchner maintains that his reelection is certain despite the claims of the opposition. "I've got you now," he told "Jimmy" Richardson, leader of the insurgents. "The fight was in the first ward and I've won."

"Looks like you have got us," replied Richardson, but his crowd professes to believe that they will name Richardson the next president.

R. F. Williams, democrat, elected from the first ward through the efforts largely of Holovitchner, over W. A. Ehlers, says he has not, however, pledged himself to vote for either Holovitchner or Richardson, and would take the position himself if tendered. Neither is Williams held to be pledged to Christie or Kennedy for the seventh ward membership.

The first skirmish in the battle will be over the resignation of Cott, whose successor may, with another, hold the balance of the power in the board.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE RESIGNS

Head of British Embassy to Devote Rest of Life to Literary Work.

SIR CECIL SPRING-RICE SUCCEEDS Present British Minister to Sweden Has Been Chosen for Place Is One of the Most able Diplomats.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—James Bryce, the British ambassador to the United States, has tendered his resignation and will return to England. There has been no official announcement of the resignation and the embassy will make no statement, but it was learned tonight on high authority that Mr. Bryce informed President Taft of his action at the White House yesterday.

It is understood that the ambassador submitted to the president the name of the British government's choice for his successor and at the same time stated his own intention of returning home as soon as possible.

President Taft, it is said, requested that the announcement be withheld until he could have an opportunity to discuss it with Secretary of State Knox. Mr. Knox returned to the city tonight and it is expected that an official announcement tomorrow will follow his conference with the president.

News Not Unexpected.

While the news that Ambassador Bryce is to retire will be received with deep regret in official circles and by the country generally, it is not wholly unexpected. There has been no break in the harmonious relations of the distinguished Englishman and his government, but it has been an open secret for some time that Mr. Bryce, advancing in years, desired to surrender his post and give entire attention to the completion of the literary work, which has occupied so large a part of his life. His book on South America, written since his tour of that country, two years ago, is just off the press and he is about to begin a work covering his recent tour of Australia and New Zealand.

Facing the British ambassador in the United States just now are several great and troublesome problems, and it is known that Mr. Bryce's friends feared if he continued in office at this time he would break down his health and probably have to abandon his literary efforts. Among other things, the Panama canal toll question promises to furnish a disagreeable and unsatisfactory diplomatic task, with little prospect of being brought to a successful conclusion.

Leader of Englishmen.

Mr. Bryce's appointment as the ambassador to Washington attracted widespread attention at the time it was made. He was then a member of the British cabinet, serving as secretary of Irish affairs in the liberal ministry of Sir Campbell-Bannerman. The Irish question was then nearing its most critical stage and as head of the Irish office Mr. Bryce had much to do in shaping the preliminary work leading up to the home rule bill, if he had remained in the cabinet he would probably have been the author of that measure which later brought on the constitutional struggle in England and led to the limitation on the rights of the house of peers in obstructing legislation from the commons.

The selection of a British statesman and man of letters of such prominence for the Washington post was due largely to the desire to send to this country one of England's foremost public men. Among the others mentioned at the time were Lord Lansdowne and several of those most prominent in British public life. But among these Mr. Bryce was recognized as the one peculiarly qualified for the post at Washington, as in addition to his notable public service in England he had an established reputation in the United States for his brilliant literary work, "The American Commonwealth."

This was not only accepted as a standard on both sides of the water, but it was looked upon as one of the notable productions of a British officer who had viewed American public life from a thoroughly sympathetic standpoint. Mr. Bryce was therefore regarded as especially fitted for carrying forward the era of good feeling between the two countries and for bringing to a culmination the desire on both sides of the water for a treaty of arbitration which would take the place ratified by the senate.

Given Cordial Reception.

Mr. Bryce came to Washington under most favorable conditions. He was given a most cordial farewell in London by the Pilgrim society, made up of many prominent Americans and some of the leaders in British public life, and was similarly welcomed on his arrival at New York by the American branch of the Pilgrim society. In Washington he alone took active part in diplomatic work and at the same time found time to continue his literary labors.

Mr. Bryce said at the time to a friend: "I am particularly glad to come back to America in order to continue my observation of American public affairs and to round out the conclusions stated in my earlier work."

This resulted in his writing extended additions to "The American Commonwealth" which have been published since he came to this country. His next turned his attention to South America, visiting many of the principal countries, and stopping at Panama for a personal inspection of the great work of such vital interest to the two countries.

Arbitration Treaty.

On the diplomatic side, Mr. Bryce's most notable achievement was in conducting the negotiations with Secretary Knox leading to the conclusion of the British-American treaty of arbitration. This work presented many obstacles. The

Magical Effect of New Face Peeler

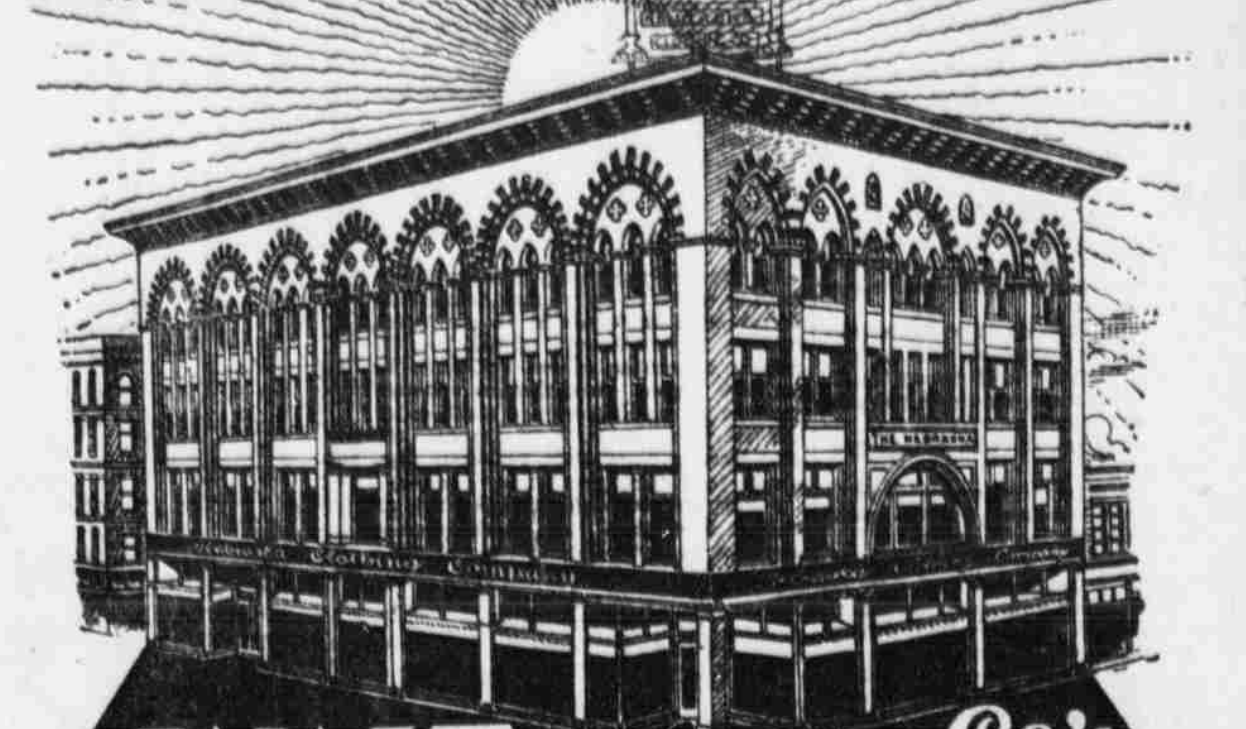

(Women's National Journal.)
To maintain a clear, rosy, youthful complexion there is nothing so simple to use and yet so effective as ordinary mercuric cream, which you can get at any drug store. Just apply the wax at night as you would cold cream; in the morning wash it off with warm water. If you've never tried it you can't imagine the magical effect of this harmless home treatment.

The mercuric in the wax causes the worn-out skin to come off in minute particles, a little at a time, and soon you have entirely shed the offensive cuticle. The fresh young under skin now in evidence is so healthy and girlish looking so free from any appearance of artificiality, you wonder why you had not heard of this marvelous complexion-renewing secret long ago.

To get rid of your wrinkles, here's a formula that is wonderfully effective. 1 oz. powdered sassafras, dissolve in ½ pt. witch hazel. Rub the face in this and you will be simply astonished at the results, even after the first trial.—Advertisement.

President Directs Trust Prosecutions to Be Carried Out

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The Department of Justice is making a strenuous effort to push as close to close as possible all the pending anti-trust prosecution of the Taft administration for President-elect Wilson and his attorney general when they take the oath of office on March 1. The taking of testimony in the suits, will have been completed, it is said, and the cases be before the courts for decision before the republican administration expires.

Among the important issues which may likely go over into the Wilson administration for final preparation for the courts are the cases against the National Cash Register company, the "motion picture trust," several alleged steamship "pools" and the United Shoe Machinery company.

President Taft has established a record in anti-trust prosecutions, having instituted a total of seventy-one cases, while the combined total anti-trust prosecutions of the administrations of President Harrison, Cleveland, McKinley and Roosevelt or since the passage of the Sherman law was sixty-two.

Anthracite Coal Operators Declare Prices Not Raised

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Because of the uneasiness regarding the supply of anthracite and the fact that some consumers are complaining that an abnormally high price is asked for coal, the committee of operators today issued a statement in which they say:

"The larger mining companies are holding absolutely to their circular prices. They have not advanced these to the dealers to whom they sell and have no intention of doing so. By far the greater part of the total anthracite output is being sold by the original producers at the circular prices."

The statement concludes: "The operators are convinced that though this year's production is behind last year's consumers will not suffer for want of coal if they will content themselves with moderate purchases for the time and not attempt to lay in a large store in advance and thus create an artificial scarcity."
